THE MUNSTER WAR-SONG.*

А. D. 1190.

Can the depths of the ocean afford you not graves, That you come thus to perish afar o'er the waves: To redden and swell the wild torrents that flow, Through the valley of vengeance, the dark Aharlow

The clangour of conflict o'erburthens the breeze, From the stormy Slieve Bloom to the stately Galtees; Your taverns and torrents are purple with gore. Slievenamon, Glencoloc, and sublime Galtymore

The sun-burst that slumbered embalmed in our tears Tipperary! shall wave o'er thy tall mountaineers! And the dark hill shall bristle with sabre and spear, while one tyrant remains to forge manacles here.

The riderless war-steed careers o'er the plain, With a shaft in his flank and a blood-dripping mane, His gallant breast labors, and glare his wild eyes; He plunges in torture—falls—shivers—and dies.

Let the trumpets ring triumph! the tyrant is slain, He reels o'er his charger deep pierced through the brain And his myriads are flying like leaves on the gale, But who shall escape from our hills with the tale?

For the arrows of vengeance are showering like rain, And choke the strong rivers with islands of slain, Till thy waves, "lordly Shannon," all crimsonly flow

Like the billows of hell with the blood of the foe. Ave! the foemen are flying, but vainly they fly-Revenge, with the fleetness of lightning, can vie And the septs of the mountains spring up from each rock

And rush down the ravines like wolves on the flock. And who shall pass over the stormy Slieve Bloom To tell the pale Saxon of tyranny's doom :

When, like tigers from ambush, our fierce mountaine Leap along from the crags with their death-dealing spears They came with high boasting to bind us as slaves

But the glen and the torrent have yawned for theil From the gloomy Ardfinnan to wild Templemore

From the Suir to the Shannon-is red with their gore. By the soul of Heremon ! our warriors may smile. To remember the march of the foe through our isle; Their banners and harness were costly and gay, And proudly they flashed in the summer sun's ray

The hilts of their falchions were crusted with gold, And the gems of their helmets were bright to behold By Saint Bride of Kildare! but they moved in fair show, To gorge the young eagle of dark Aharlow!

assigns the date of the event which it is supposed to celebrate to the year 1190; citing, under that year, the account by Moore of a victory of the Irish over the English at Thurles, in the County Tipperary. But, between the years 1174 and 2195, it appears that the English received several severe defeats near Thurles. * The annonymous writer of this spirited war-song eccived several severe defeats near Thurles. The first, in 1174, occurred thus. Earl Strongbow advanced as far as Cashel, into Munster, in order to plunder that province; but Roderic O'Connor, king of Connaught, marching to assist Donald O'Brien, king of Thomond, the Earl found it necessary to halt at Cashel and send for reinforcements to Dublin. Accordingly, a strong body of brave and well-equipped knights and infantry a red tide that stained the waters along the marched under Herve de Montmarais, from Dublin in the direction of Thurles, towards Cashel. Meanwhile. he kings of Connaught and Thomond, learning the approach of this select corps to join Strongbow at Cashel, proach of this select corps to join Strongbow at Cashel, I wisely resolved to intercept it. The two princes, for this purpose, placed their Connacian and Dalcassian clans in ambush for Herve's troops, near Thurles, and tell upon them by surprise early in the morning. The resistance of the English was brave but unavailing; four of their principal leaders with 1,700 of their troops were cut to pieces, and Strongbow and the survivors were obliged to fly in dismay to Waterford; but upon hearing this news, the inhabitants rising upon the English garrison of 200 men, put them to the sword, the Earl being forced to take refuge in a neighboring island, from which, after remaining there a month, he effected his escape to Dublin. The second defeat was given to the English near Thurles, in 1192, by Donald O'Brien, king of Thomond. in which defeat, says the account, a great slaughter was made of the foreigners. The sthird defeat, which appears to have been the same as that mentioned by Moore, under the year 1190, happened in 1196. The allied Irish princes, Cathal O'Conor of the Red Hand, Hind, king of Connaught, O'Brien, king of Thomond. and MacCarthy, king of Desmond, traversed Munster, destroying so many castles of the English there, that multitudes of those settlers were slain; and, on the arrival of Philip de Wisornia (or of Worcester) from Eugland, with a str.ng English force, to the assistance of the English in Munster, "himself and his whole host (adds the chronicler) were defeated, and a bloody slaughter made amongst them." wisely resolved to intercept it. The two princes, for

A NEW BAILBOAD.

On Friday, says the Ballinrobe Chronicle of the 17th ult., Sir Ralph Cusack, Chairman, with Messrs. Munsell, La Touche, Morris, and others, directors of the Midland Railway, Messrs. Price, engineer, and J. E. Ward, manager of that extensive reliway system arrived ger, of that extensive railway system, arrived in this town from Claremorris, remained at tlemen was to see and inquire as to what facili-ties the district afforded for the construction of ties the district afforded for the construction of a railway from Claremorris to this town or to Cong, and that they are now fully alive to the necessity of a railway to Ballinrobe. It is not, however, too much to hope that a railway will be built without much further delay. We have of home the necessity of a railway to Ballinrobe. We have of the level, but above the level of nations.

We believe we can safely assert that Captain Knox, the proprietor of the land in and about the town, will co-operate and afford every facility for the construction of a line through his property; and that the good work once entered on with an earnest desire to succeed, the promoters will find the commercial classes ready to join in the under-

GREAT LABOR MEETING IN THURLES.

A meeting, called by the Irish Laborer's Association for the purpose of advancing their movement, took place recently at Thurles, and was attended by a vast mass of people from the surrounding district. It was expected that Mr. Butt, M. P., would have attended, but that honorable and learned gentleman did not, however. The meeting was held in a field outside the town. Several very handsome banners and flags, accompanied by bands, proceeded in procession with the people to the ground. The banners bore harps and the sunburst, and such popular mottoes and inscriptions as "Faith and Fatherland," "God Save Ireland," "Our Own Again." Round the platform, which was erected in the centre of the field, there could not have been less than ten or twelve thousand people, mostly composed of the young men of the respectable farming class. It may truly be said that, so far as the noble county of Tipperary is concerned, the demonstration shows that the people are highly in favor of an amelioration in the condition and an improvement in the the condition and an improvement in the dwellings of the agricultural laboring class of the country.

PRECOCIOUS YOUTH.

The juveniles of Waterford are certainly preco cious in more senses than one. They not only are deep in political lore, but they ape the vices of adults with a perseveranc worthy of a better cause. Three of these youngsters, the eldest not more than ten years of age, felt an irresistadesire to imbibe alchohol, and whilst prowling along the quay they alighted on an empty whiskey cask, which was lying outside Mr. Manning's store. With astonishing ingenuity, one of them who had a stiff felt hat filled it with water, threw the liquid into the cask, which they then rolled backwards and forwards for some time, after which they again poured the contents into the hat, and drunk the "grog."
It must have been pretty strong, for in less than fifteen minutes they were "dead drunk."
One of them was found lying in a drunken sleep in the park, and and was brought to the lock-up. He was brought before the Mayor next day, but was let off on the promise of his mother to give him a sound whipping.

CAPTURE OF A WHALE.

A few weeks ago, some men who were reaping whale altered his course and proceeded rapidly out to sea; the other, less wise, advance towards the shallow water, and after bumping severely against the rocks, was washed in stunned condition ashore. At this moment Mr clasp-knife in the breast, from which flowed out shore. As soon as the tide had subsided a little, half a dozen men with sharpened knives assailed the whale's side, and in a few hours removed the entire outward coating of blubber The value of the oil is said to be about £6 Dimensions—24 feet long; 12 round girth; 4½ tail, and 4½ tons supposed weight.

THE LABORERS' MEETING

At Thurles was most successful. The movement which Mr. Peter O'Leary commenced is spreading itself steadily over the country. Friends of the poor laborer are springing up in every quarter, promising a fair settlement of is grievances. Green banners were unfurled at the demonstration, and the people present wore green sashes and emblems. Several speakers addressed the assembly, setting forth the wants of the laborer and the misery which he and his family endure. Mr. Johnson, of Kanturk, spoke at length, and convinced his hearers turk, spoke at length, and convinced his hearers that a remedy must be provided for our toiling population. After the meeting broke up a procession was formed, headed by the bearers of the green flags and bannerets. In an orderly manner they marched through the town of Thurles, and afterwards quietly dispersed. PRESENTATION TO FATHER BURKE,

The Irishmen of Darlington and Albert-hill, The Irishmen of Darlington and Albert-hill, hearing that the Very Rev. Father Burke would be at Newcastle-upon-Tyne at the opening of a new church, resolved to signalize the event in an appropriate manner by presenting the historian priest with a token of their high appreciation of his noble work. Funds were collected and he was precented with a beautiful appreciation of his noble work. Funds were collected and he was presented with a beautiful address, composed by J. J. THE CRISTS IN FRANCE.

At a meeting of Members of the Left, held on Wednesday, Gambetta addressed the Members on the impending question which was to be sub mitted to the Assembly relative to the propos change in the Government. Gambetta declared his confident belief that the result would be entirely satisfactory to the party in power, and that the majority in the Assembly would vote in favor of Republicanism. He urged his fellowlaborers in the cause of the Republic to crush in one grand effort the rapidly growing and threatening power of the Monarchists. The general sentiment of the meeting was that the debate in the Assembly would result in a Republican victory.

Rev. Geoffry Keating, D. D., AUTHOR OF "HISTORY OF IRELAND;" "THE THREE SHAFTS;" "POEMS;" "SONGS;" "AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF THE LORD DE DECIES."

It was in the reign of King James the Pedant, and on a Sabbath-day. The humble church of Tybrid, in Tipperary, was thronged within and surrounded without by an eager congregaof high rank, whose silken attire and velvet trappings formed strange contrasts to the mass of homely frieze and rustic blue that surrounded them. Some of them had ridden from Cashel and Clonmel to hear a sermon from the eloquent man of Tybrid. And they were not disappointed. The mass was said and the text was read, and it was this solemn commandment-"Thou shalt not commit adultery."

As the preacher proceeded in his fervent enlargement of this text there was observed a stir and a bustle among the gay visitors. The cause was found to be the visible agitation of a lady with whose name in conjunction with that of Carew, the Lord President of Munster, fame had rumored scandalous tidings. The preacher proceeded without a moment's pause in his discourse, and waxed even more zealous against those who violated this most solemn commandment. The eyes of the whole congregation were upon the reputed sinner, and covered with shame and mortified to the soul, she hurried away at the close of the discourse. She stayed not until she reached the Lord President, where she advanced a bitter charge against the preacher. An order was issued for his arrest-his humble home was surrounded by soldiers; but Father Keating, anticipating exclude from its columns all matters not tend such a result, or forewarned by his friends, had ing to the advocacy of their principles, the dealready fled for safety into the adjoining mountains.

Dr. Keating was a poet as well as annalist. Several of his pieces are highly popular in Munster; they were all written in Irish. Among them is "A Farewell to Ireland." a poem addressed to his harper, "An Elegy on the Death of Lord de Decies," a mock heroic on his servant Symon, stanzas written to a lady, with versions others, copies of pearly all of which various others, copies of nearly all of which have been preserved by the Royal Irish Acad-emy, among whose manuscripts they remain.

His beautiful poem-"Thoughts on Innisfail" we published in our issue of September 20th.

San Francisco,

Nationalist Printing and Publishing Co. The friends of Ireland and the friends of universal freedom have long felt the want on this coast of a newspaper which should rigorously fense of their rights, the increase of their knowl edge and numbers, the elevation of their sentiments and character, and the formation of an effective union among all sections, parties creeds and classes of liberty-loving Irishmen of Salamanca. On his return to Ireland, according to the authority of the local traditions of Tybrid, he had travelled a large portion of the country collecting materials for a history of Ireland. Everywhere he had been admitted NATIONALIST PRINTING AND PUBLISHING COMto consult authorities, with the exception, say PANY." We employ no Chinese labor, nor ever did, and our goods have always given satisfaction and built up 4 trade which those parties in their petty meanness are seeking to deprive us of. Therefore, we caution all who wish to buy our goods and patronize WHITE LABOR, to see that they are stamped as above.

The New German Guns.

The German journals announce that the recent trials of new guns on iron targets, which took place at Tegel, near Berlin, fully satisfied all expectations. The shot from the 11-inch ring cast-steel gun penetrated an iron plate 12 inches thick; that from the 10-inch gun of the same pattern an iron plate of 11 inches, and there was force to spare in both cases. At Krupp's works, at Essen, trials have been made with the newly-constructed 30½ centimetre (12 inch) ring cast-steel gun, and the result justifies the belief that this gun will pierce 14, and perthe belief that this gun will pierce 14, and perhaps 15 inches, of armor. Thus, the strongest iron-clad now existing, her British Majesty's ship Devastation, which is provided with an armor of 14 idches, will no longer be invulnerable if opposed to such guns. It has been decided to use the 10 and 11 inch. guns for the cided to use the 10 and 11-inch guns for the present, only for the defense of the coasts. Their introduction on board ships would probably necessitate considerable alterations in the construction of vessels of war.

We have started with the above as a beginning for what we intend to make a standing Directory for all the Irish Organizations, military and civic, on this Coast. To enable us to supply omissions, and to make the Directory full and satisfactory, we respectfully call on the Secretaries of the different Irish societies of the city and the State to forward us at once the names of their officers, the time and place of meeting, the date of their organization, and whatever other information they may deem important. We will publish all matters of importance without charge.

This is the way in which a reporter can write up a city sunset, when he gives his mind to it:
"As the lengthening shadows merge one into "Good morning, gentleman," says a bookpedler, entering a railroad car. No one responded. "Beg pardon if I have said too much; I withdraw the last expression."

"As the lengthening shadows merge one into another, betokening the end of the day, the ridges and spires of the city seem gilt with molten gold, while the mellowed light of the declining sun falls upon them, and soon upon all a ruby tinge overflows."

THE IRISH NATIONALIST

SAN FRANCISCO, OCTOBER 11, 1873.

"Nationality is no longer an unmeaning or despised name among us. It is welcomed by the higher ranks. It is the inspiration of the bold, and the hope of the people. It is the summary name for many things. It seeks a literature made by Irishmen and colored by our scenery, manners and character. It desires to see Art applied to express Irish thoughts and belief. It would make our music sound in every parish at twilight, our pictures sprinkle the walls of every house, and our Poetry and History sit at every hearth. It would thus create a race of men full of a more intensely "Nationality is no longer an unmeaning or create a race of men full of a more intensely Irish characte: and knowledge and to that race it would give Ireland. It would them the seas of Ireland to sweep with give them the seas of freland to sweep with their nets and launch on with their navy, the harbors of Ireland to receive a greater commerce than any island in the world; the soil of Ireland to live on by more millions than starve here now; the fame of Ireland to enhance by their genius and valor. The Independence of Ireland to guard by laws and arms. THOMAS DAVIS.

"Who is abject enough to despair of the Cause of Right, and Truth, and Freedom?"

John MITCHEL, Oct. 25th, 1853.

THE RACE OF THE RACES.

If Columbus could bave foreseen the future of his "New World" it would have made him mad. It is not yet three hundred years and already this Northern continent trembles under the careering feet of civilization. Its rivers. from the sea to the source, are measured and sounded with deep sea-line or hunter's staff; its woods groan, like Ovid's Dryad's, at their coming desolation; its plains are oppressed with produce; its cities shoot up like tropical fruits; its wilds are tamed: its wonders are familiar; its present is astounding, its future immeasurable. And yet it is but a young country, very young. Young in years, but old in enterprise, It puts its hand forth and grasps every lever of greatness-iron, gold, the press, steam, printing, electricity, are all tools with which this wise young nation works, beating the very inventors of most of them.

Yes! the long-fallow continent at last feels its masters. The rivers of the North wind their white arms about huge mill-wheels, while human anatomies oversee them from the banks; the vast valleys of the West, Midland, and our Orion fruitful Western slope, are encrusted with golden grain; the hot Savannahs of the South are clothed with the cotton and tobacco plants, while vines, tea-trees.mulberrys, and all the fruits of the temperate and tropic zones. are to be found within our borders from the Atlantic to the Pacific sea-board,-standing all still as death in the unstirred air. It is a young country, very young; young in years, but old in achievements.

No wonder Europe is being deserted by her children for America. No wonder they come hither daily, crowding the decks of hasty ships -the Italian with his casts and ideas; the Spaniard with his fire and gravity; the German with his skill and strong self-will; the Frenchman with his industry and esprit; the Englishman with his sturdiness and self-love; the Irish_ nan with his vague ambition and unsettled plans No wonder! But that the country takes them all in, and grinds them as in a mill and turns them out modified, intensified, naturalizedthat is something wonderful indeed! It is a great field—the greatest, far and away, humanity ever saw. And how do we of Ireland run in the race?-first or last?-distanced or winners?how?

Truly, in numbers, we are here a people-a great people! But in purpose, in enterprise, in success. How do we stand in these respects? We will blame no more-clap trap forbid. If we are careless let us grow prudent. If we are uneducated, let us labor for knowledge. If we are irritable, angry, unbrotherly, let us be gentle. kind and fraternal. Oh! great indeed would ever dreamt of, or Ireland ever could have borne. Let us be ambitious, for here it is a man, but, on the contrary, raise others with being appropriated-shall we not have our share? Shall we not, too, found cities, and schools, and communities? Are we to be the manure of the soil, spread abroad only to enstrong exercise of steadfast virtues, contribute our full share to the greatness, the guidance, the hour of choice has struck in the tower of Time.

The "Guardian" Ahead!

THE Guardian, the only reliable Catholic journal published on this coast, comes to hand this week spicy and readably as ever, improved in appearance and showing every indication of a healthy and vigorous existence. It is a journal which should be taken in every Catholic home, whether Irish or American, for although a late accesssion to the Catholic press, it occupies a prominent position in the first rank of church journalism.

Rev. Geoffry Keating, D. D., AUTHOR OF "HISTORY OF IRELAND," ETC.

On our second page will be found a short memoir of this learned historian and divine, but we omitted to mention that John O'Mahoney has translated and published an edition of this rare and valuable history.

CONCERNING TOOLS AND THOSE WHO USE THEM.

Since the old oaken houses of Ireland tufted the white walled raths—since the red deer bled in the larder, and the red wine in the hallsince white-bearded Brehons dealt law and equity on the hills of Ormond and Tyrconnellsince "the wild geese" swept from the Shannon shore—the children of Ireland at home and abroad have been tools in the hands of strangers. Tools in England, toiling in the mill; shorn Sampsons, whose blinded strength made mirth any demonstration in any department in which for the Philistines. Tools in France, bright, sharp, golden-hilted, hewing down the enemies of the Bourbon line. Tools in India and all the East cleaving turbans (with the heads in them) to the cry of Faugh an bealac! Tools in America, in the hands of many masters. Tools, firstly to their own. The manure of the church, not the seed; they have left monuments, but no posterity. Why? Their children in self-defense had to cut the connection? Who would have spade for his father, or a mop for his mother? Who would boast the blood of a drudge, or the it is productive of no tangible good, but on the parentage of a fool? Tools, secondly, to the lazy or too impractical for the country, who wanted to get in any office window, should first gather a little crowd of his "dear countrymen"and solicit them to hold their independent shoulders together for his convenience. Hence the disease of the shoulder-joint so common and so fatal among us. So have the proud Irish race fallen! So the learned, the poetical, the musical, the chivalrous race have come to be little better than stilts for great and little men's uses! And of them what hope? Truly if all were tools, hope there would be none. All are not. Of this people, towering in their midst llke pines in brushwood, you find erect, comely, aspiring natures, deep-rooted, earth-clasping, hearts Heaven's sun and dew-Truth and the it, and whose honor and courage are redoubts that cannot be stormed

There is hope while such men live. Yes! and there is hope also, for the numerous party of the Tools themselves. For all Tool-dom indeed their is hope, more or less remotely, for it has heard the truth and has felt it. Our poor baffled, used, abused and abandoned people have heard the Truth; and they believe in it. For look you, what is it makes, a man man-like? Is it tailoring or barbering, or outward whitening of any kind? Alexander Selkirk, in Fernandez had none of these, and yet stood he there in his goat-beard cap and his own co-equal beard; and his paradisaical fatigue-dress, a full man, and every beast of the field and bird of the air, knew him for a man, and he had do- to that for which the magnanimous Republican minion over them. AN EXAMPLE.

It would be well if, not only in Ireland but in America, the lesson which the Republican Government of France lately taught to their people, was followed to the very letter. Some hot-headed partisans of Republicanism conceived the idea, a natural one enough, of celebrating on the 4th of September the downfall of the Empire. They were disagreeably surprised, however, when a proclamation was issued by the Government strictly forbidding it was supposed such an attempt would be made. To the credit of the French people, however, be it said that, notwithstanding the impulsiveness for which they are proverbial, no such attempt was made. A few extreme Reds and frothy Radicalstrue to thier creed endeavored to organize a demonstration, but the attempt failed niserably as it deserved. The celebration of national victories is of course just, and perhaps in some instances calculated to keep slive and strengthen the patriotism of a people; but when contrary outrages the feelings of a certain porpoliticians. Every wretched place-beggar, too tion of the people, worthy of respect and cooperation in all save their political faith, it becomes the duty of the Government to crush out the spirit of aggression, and peremptorily forbid any festival or celebration which may call up unpleasant recollections of defeat and disgrace. The repression of celebration on the birthday of the present Republic of France was ordered, not by Bonapartists, Orleanists, or Legitimatists, but by the Republic itself. This is as it should be. France, in her present disorganized condition, cannot afford to have the seeds of disunion still further disseminated amongst her people. Already she is torn by various factions who emulateing the fratricidal sons' of Spain; hold the knife to the throat catching in their arms, and holding in their of their unfortunate country. Ere France can again take her place amongst the foremost Faith of it. The better genius of the old island nations of Europe her children must forget seems to have retreated into such men as into their petty animosities and past differences, fortresses whose breasts are as bastions about and, joining hand-in-hand, struggle only for the elevation of their country and the defeat of despotic, wolfish Cæsars in sheep's clothing, whose only object is to destroy law and order, provoke internicene strife, that they may raise themselves to eminence and power on the ruins of their country. Wisely has the Republic desired that Frenchmen should become oblivious of the past. We are induced to those remarks by reading in our Irish exchanges from day to day, of ruffianly Orange outrages, and descriptions of scenes which might with far more propriety be enacted in the wilds of Africa, amongst a tribe of savages primitively rude and brutal as the wild beasts of their native jungle. Perhaps the Orangemen of Ireland will at no distant period act in a manner similar

T. C. LUBY ON IRISH PROTESTANT NATIONALITY AND HOME RULE.

Since the passing of the disestablishment bills. have we as yet seen any increased tendency on the part of the Irish Protestants, especially Episcopalians, to march over to the ranks of Irish nationality? Most assuredly we have; and every-day we see the tendency slowly but surely gaining strength. The nationalizing effects of the disestablishment bill among the Protestants of Ireland will become more and more manifest every year and every day.

1873, we should see not merely several Protestant gentlemen, and even fellows of Trinity College, Dublin, coming forward to take the lead in an Irish national movement of any shape or form, unless restrained by consideration or civility, I should incontinently have told such a prophet that he was insane. Yet what do we see realized in Ireland to-day?—what but my supposed mad prophet's dream.

Do we not see those distinguished fellows of the Dublin University—the Reverend Professor Galbraith, the Reverend Professor Haughton, a man of European celebrity, the Reverend Professor Shaw, and other distingushed Protestants -at the head of the Irish Home Rule movement or at least prominent among its leaders.

Pursuing its present policy, and with its present limited aims, it cannot hope ever, thoroughly or satisfactorily, to settle the Irish national question and the old quarrel with England. But still I must maintain that, so far as their demand goes, it goes in the right, or in other words the national direction, consequently the Home Rulers are entitled to be ecognized as a section of the great Irish national party.

It must astonish many, then, to see Proestants like Lord Garvagh, the head of the Irish branch of the Cannings, chief of the Prime Minister, George Canning, sprang-to see men such as he, and King Harman, and a host of others, taking a lively interest in this movement: but it is doubly wonderful to any one who knows what a hot-bed of bigotry and intolerance, of keen anti-Catholic feeling, Trinity College was up to the most recent days, to see or hear of Fellows of that famous institution taking a part in the foremost files of an Irish national movement, side by side with Catholic colleagues in leadership. Everybody who knows anything about the history of Trinity College, knows well that, from the day it was founded on the site of the suppressed monastery of All Hallows, in the reign of Elizabeth. and during the viceroyalty of the corrupt Fitzwilliam down to our own time, its principal mission, so to speak, was to denationalize Irishmen. I say this emphatically, in spite of the well known fact that numbers of glorious Irish patriots and nationalists-ay, even rebels and patriot-martyrs-confessed old Trinity their Alma Mater. If Grattan and Curran, Tone and the Emmets. Moore and Robert Holmes, Davis, should sustain himself in the solitude of his spet, at least, of the invidious enemy whose Mitchel, and a number of other Irish patriots, were educated there, still it is notorious that these are only exceptions proving the rule. The true aim and practical result of the Trinity College training was to Anglicize Irishmen. But all this is apparently changed to-day. It step to the front of the Home Rule movement. but the general tone of Trinity is altered. The anti-Irish feeling is softened. The Fellows and most liberal feeling towards their Catholic Countrymen, and manifest all due consideration and respect for their just rights and claims. The old exclusiveness, which shut out Catholics, and even Protestant dissenters, from participation in the highest honor and positions of anti-Irish in the true sense. Mr. Butt, though Catholic populace. The President of the Farmers' League or Association in Limerick, Mr. umphed on Home Rule principles, in spite of on the Gulf coast of Newfoundland, where ears the singularly able Catholic Bishop Moriarity, the ocean steamers would immediately sail. the friend (moryah! as old Dan would say) of "the Fenians." Many other recent occurrences show an evident rapprochement between the Catholics and Protestants of Ireland. May faithful lovers, and may it win the freedom of their long suffering country.

PACIFIC COAST.

Friday afternoon on Paine's creek, twelve miles from Red Bluff, a shooting affray took place which resulted in the death of two brothers by a Mr. Dodge. It seems that John and Lee Alberty went to Dodge's house and were seen by Mrs. Dodge, who screamed and ran away. Mr. Dodge went to the door, and was fired at by John. Dodge returned the fire, killing him. Lee, who was a short distance in the rear, commenced firing at Dodge, but without effect, when Dodge again fired and killed him. The difficulty was about the land on which Dodge was living, He was arrested.

W. H. Williams, whose ranch is eleven miles If any one had told me some dozen or fifteen southwest of Coluso, sheared from four Spanish years ago, that to-day, in the year of our Lord Merino Michigan bucks 102 pounds of wool. From four yearlings he sheared 19 pounds each, one 20 and one 22 pounds; the other was a two-yenr-old, shearing 22 pounds. A three-year-old buck from the Hoyt stock sheared 161/3 pounds, seven months' Spring clip, and 16 pounds this Eall, five months' clip, making 32½ pounds for the year's growth. Mr. Williams has others of his own raising which sheared 12 pounds, five months' clip. His band of 3,300 average four pounds to the sheep.

Three Sacramento rounders, under the impression that a man from the rural districts had money, inveigled him into a lonely place a few nights ago, and after beating him senseless robbed him of his cash, which amounted to less than $3. They were all arrested and pleaded guilty.

Some three weeks ago a man named James Walker disappeared from his cabin in Port Wine, Sierra county, and nothing was seen or heard of him for ten or twelve days, when his body was discovered in a cut a short distance from town, with his rifle lying beside it. He had shot himself through the head. He was a Scotchman by birth, and had lived in Port Wine for many years.

At Gold Hill, last Friday, an infant child was accidentally shot through the head with a small deringer pistol in the hands of the child's father, who did not know that the weapon was loaded. The child was still alive at last accounts, though, as the ball passed directly through its brain, its recovery is hardly probable.

At Antioch last week a Chinawoman, through Irish branch of the Cannings, chief of the grief at the loss of her infant child, attempted branch from which that eloquent and brilliant to commit suicide by drowning. She was rescued by her husband. Her journey to the water was the first time she had set foot on the ground for two years.

A Comparison.

It is highly probable, says the Universe, that were civilized England as generous and as polite towards the Irish peasantry as "barbarous" Russia is towards her serfs, we should never have heard of a Repeal of the Union, or wholesale emigration, or Fenianism or Home Rule. Since 1862, when Alexander the Second's celebrated ukase gave freedom to the serfs of Russia, the process of securing to these emancipated laborers, a legal right to the old common lands as well as to part of the estates of their late is not merely that several high academical Dons owners, has been going on gradually but surely. The compulsory sale of these lands to the peasantry has resulted in each of the serfs becoming possessed, on an average, of land to the value of £12. Inasmuch as most of the lands are held by the community, and as 6,992,494 serfs, exclusive of their families, were emancipated, the free peasants of "baabarous Russia" now hold landed property to the extent of £80,000,-000. The unfortunate peasantry of Ireland might well envy their compeers of "barbarous" the University, is doomed. Ere long old Trinity Russia. But then England is the most civilwill be as largely Irish in feeling an it was before ized and the greatest nation on the face of the earth, and the Irish peasantry form a portion a Protestant, is accepted as a leader by the Irish of that splendid nation. CITY NOTES OF THE WEEK.

DR. W. C. Puxty of Albion School, Sneintonl Nottingham, is an educated gentleman whose vaulting ambition overtops that of the ever-famous Cataline. Last week he applied to the Academy of Science, asking to become a corresponding member, although he has already appended to his name in print "F. G. S., of Edinburhg, France, and Cornwall, Fellow of the Royal Botanical and Zoological Societies of Vienna, Member of the College of Preceptors, etc., etc., F. E. S., F. R. M. S." The President remarked: "I should judge from reading that, that he wanted simply another tail to his name." The members of the Academy smiled, and the letter was laid on the table.

THE production of Wilkie Collins' New Magdalen at the California Theatre has been the cause of much bitterness of spirit amongst our local dramatic critics, some of whom contend that the play is calculated to lower the high standard of morality established in California; while others sustain that it teaches a lesson of morality so exalted that we poor sinners of the West are unable to appreciate, and unwilling to accept it. It has been eminently successful, however, and remunerative to the management, consequently it matters little what the censors of our daily press may think of its merits.

AT half-past one on Wednesday morning the rain began to pour in torrents. This lasted about fifteen minutes and then its violence by his bondsmen. ceased, and the gentle showers began. These continued until nearly 11 o'clock, and it is estimated that at its close the rainfall so far amounted to 72-100 of an inch. The fall up to the same time last year was only 14-100 of an inch. The rain began earlier last year, the first occuring September 25th. No more fell until the 25th of October. The late rain of this year is regarded as an indication of a wet season.

WHILE the last edition of the Bulletin was being struck off, on Monday, a boy named Charles Schram, about fourteen years old, had his right arm broken at the elbow, and the bones so badly mashed that amputation will be necessary. The boy while amusing himself had his arms caught between the straps and the pully, and before the press could be stopped his arm was badly shattered. The boy [probably would have been killed but for one of the pressmen, who caught the lad and held him so as to follow the turning of the strap. The lad received all possible attention. His mother lives at Silver City.

THE labors of the founders of the Waiters and Cooks' Mutual Aid and Beneficial Society have been crowned with success. The society is established on a firm basis, and the constitution and by-laws are printed in book-form, and were read at the public meeting held at Hibernia Hall on Friday evening. Those who had not already joined, then had an opportunity of ascertaining that should sickness assail them, they may, by a very small outlay while in health, secure themselves from the pecuniary embarressments that sickness always brings to the workingman.

John, alias Dooney, Harris, a "coaster" of considerable pugilistic renown, was conveyed to the City Prison on Monday last for drunkeness. He had scarcely been locked up in cell No. 8, ere he endeavored to pummel a fellow-prisoner He was taken to the City Prison by an officer. named Cunningham, but received in return a severe beating, Becoming very noisy, a "trusty" named Sprague was ordered to place Harris in the adjoining cell. In doing so Harris struck him several times in the face. An additional charge of assault and battery was entered against Harris, on which he was ordered for sentence.

At an early hour on Wednesday morning F F Bryan, Officer Gaynor received information that a Dr P J McEwan, couple of men were engaged in an angry alter. M J Gavan, cation on the corner of Sacramento and San- Francis Foley, some streets, and he went there to find out what the trouble was about. He arrested one of the John Kenealy, men, whose name is William Clark, on a charge James Aller of assault and battery. On the way to prison Thos C Maher, Clark attempted to throw away something, but Patrick Holland, the officer prevented him. What he wanted to James Barrett, throw away was a skeleton key and a lock-pick. P J Casey, An additional charge of carrying burglars' tools was preferred against him.

OFFICEE HENSLEY attempted to arrest a North Beach hoodlum last week for using vulgar and Frank Mahon, obscene language. The boy, who is one of the JA Hicks, worst of the dangerous class infecting that John Corcoran, locality, betook himself to flight, when the officer drew his pistol and fired, the ball striking Henry Heron, the ground in close proximity to the fugitive, P J Tanian, This had the effect of stopping him, but the P Ford, officer has been brought to task by his superiors

Lawrence Curran,

Matthew Noonan, for resorting to such extreme measures without just cause for doing so.

AT the meeting of the Academy of Sciences, held on last Monday evening, the President M. M. Fallon reported that Mr. Lick had presented the So- R D Pitt, Society, with a new deed for the property on P. W. Greany, Market and Fourth streets, which was based on the Society's own conditions. He thought the James O'Brien, deed as satisfactory as a deed could be drawn John Keirnan, for anything short of absolute donation. It had Flanigan & Kennelly, been revised by the most eminent lawyers in the city, who had pronounced it sound in all the J. D. Cusheon, provisions. The new deed covered the ground John Egan. of the 80x275 lot.

A. B. Meacham, Ex-Superintendent of Indian Affairs in Oregon, is delivering a series of lectures on the Modocs. On Sunday evening he lectured on the religion of the noble red man, to a respectable audience in the Powell street Methodist Church Mr Meacham can not. however, be complimented on his success as a lecturer, for now that Captain Jack and his truculent braves have expiated their offence on the scaffold, the interest in the red man of Oregon has quite died out.

THE French residents of San Francisco have determined to show their appreciation of M. Thiers' services to his country by presenting him with an album, undoubtedly the finest that has ever been prepared on the Pacific Coast. at the White House on Kearny street. It was designed by Messrs, Mezzara and executed by Serigini & Bosqui, The magnificent evidence of taste and artistic skill cost $1,700

THERE is no doubt that the schooner Ospr was really in this port in May, 1849. H. I Whitney, 218 Commercial street, says that I was in the schooner Osprey, Captain Green which arrived here in that month. Pyrne White & Co., of Hobart Town, owned her, an she sailed for Honolula and returned here November or December. Mr. Whitley bough several cases of onions on the schooner. ar took them to Sacramento. The missing link the Tichborne evidence is thus found at last.

On Tuesday William Wilson entered a resta ant on Broadway to get a bucket of water. The colored cook, John Ancus, refused to allow his to take it. Wilson drew a pistol and advance upon Ancus, when the latter knocked hi down with an iron pot. Both parties can before the Police Court yesterday. Wilson wa discharged and Ancus held. He was out of bail, but after the examination was surrendered

Henry Haight offers to erect in a central local ity a building suitable for a morgue, with th necessary offices for the Coroner and Health Officer, and all the paraphernalia required, and lease to the city for a number of years for $200 per month. He also offers the city the privilege of purchasing the property at a fair valuation, if deemed advisable, There is one thing evident and that is that the city is sadly in need of a morgue.

DENNIS MALLONEY, second mate of the ship Sunrise, on board which the cruelties to the seamen were perpetrated, has been arrested. The Evening Post with commendable liberality has offered a reward of $400 for the first officer, Harris, who has as yet succeeded in eluding the vigilance of the authorities. It also offered a reward of $100 for the capture of Molloney, and the money was instantly paid over to his captor, Felix Garcia, Constable of Bolinas and Olema townships:

On Sunday evening last, Colonel Zabriskie name is associated with the Society's title. L. TERRY, Elko, Nevada. Rev. C. A. THE WHITE SAGE.—A new preparation is offered to the public for the restoration of the hair by Dr. L. Terry, 323 Third street, and from the great number of testimonials published by prominent citizens of Elko, Nevada of its efficacy in giving strength to the hair, and the speedy return of it to those who have been bald, oblige us to look upon it with more favor than the thousand other preparations already in the market. The Elko Independent says: "A decoction of White Sage will accomplish more in restoring hald heads, fastening falling hair and renovating and giving healthy action to the scalp than a whole store of the usual remedies advertised for that purpose. Hundreds now in Nevada can testify to this fact, and a trial will convince any doubting Joseph that what we say of it in this respect will be borne out by results, if he will give it a fair trial." If such is the case, the Doctor will reap a rich harvest, for no other city can boast of as many bald-headed 'people as San Francisco. The medicine can be obtained from every druggist. None genuine without the signature of L. favored the Father Mathew Society with a lecture on the great Temperance advocate whose FIELD, Bogel & Co., General Agents. Sole Distiller, DB.

BY J. C. IRWIN. Upwards of eighty springs have rolled away ace Terence Connor sate one April day, Before his cottage on a Wicklow hill. Looking upon the prospect green and still Wheat and potatoe field and oaken glade Spreading beneath the forest sun and shade; The white cloud softly melting into rain O'er the grey peaks and low line of the main. In the blue shadow of the door, where through The turf smoke curled in wreaths of airy blue, Sate by her spinning wheel, a pretty maid, Sate by her spinning wheel, a pretty maid, The grandchild of this soldier, who had smart Many a battle in the great Brigade
Of Louis—now dispersed; and as he thought Upon the wars in which he'd taken part, And o'er the memories dearest to his heart, The tender dewy light of Ireland's sun . Lit many a scar his bronzed face upon,

As toward a bridge across a neighboring brook He east from time to time a kindly look, Until at length one he expected came-The young girl's lover, Patrick Moore by name, With whom the veteran talked-till dinner o'er-While sitting in the sunset by the door Where on a table glasses had been laid, Where near her lad, still spun the pretty maid, He cried : "Come let us drink a health, my boy, To those who fell at glorious Fontency: Tis eight and forty years this very day

They drank, and the old man from his breast Took out a stripe of silk that once had been Though dusk and fade with powder now, once green, Which proudly he unfolded to his guest, And added :- " As we mounted up the hill A ball shattered this fragment of our flag-I caught it falling and preserved the rag, A precious relic of our victory still." "Tell us what happened that day", said young O'Moore,-" I'll sing it for you," Terence said, and sung:

Bright shone the sun of April on old Tourney's torrents

The blue Schelpt flowing by the skirt of Antoine's scattered town, De Barris' wood that nor'w rd stretched, and Fontenoy

And Louis had their coure with the low hills at their backs.

For hours the battle rag'd, for hours the cannon blaz'd

In front and flank, and musketry in rattling torrents poured,

Between the French and English lines charges were

While we of the Brigade before our camp were stationed

Then Dillon, chaffing, muttered, looking through the war smoke grey :-

- It seems the Irish arm of France will not be used to-Tet, though our allies are true gold, we are not quite

And still we stood in angered mood

While flowed the French and British blood, and idly waved our green flag on the field by Fontenoy

Many a charge had Cumberland and Holland Waldie On St. Antoine, on Fontenoy and Barris' forest glade,

But though the dead were thickly piled by bastion and As little cause for French despair, there seemed, as

English hope. At length we saw the fierce and sullen Duke ride to and

Collecting his best regimentst to deal a final blow; and forthwith a great column of six thousand warriors

And silent march across the plain, like thunderclouds of

Then Rothe cried out-" Those guns will leave us nothing to destroy."

And still we stood in angered mood While flowed the French and British blood, INISH EMBASSY TO FRANCE—LEWINS AND M'NEVIN -LUTCH LIBERATING EXPEDITION FOR IRELAND -ENGLISH MISREPRESENTATIONS.

While the English conspirators were exciting the deluded Protestants to murder their Catholic brother-Irishmen in the name of religion, and were at the same time robbing the enlightened Protestants of their arms, the United Irishmen were not neglecting their own interests. Accordingly, in March 1797, Mr. Lewins, a respectable Irish solicitor, was sent over by the Irish Directory, as envoy to the French Directory. He was instructed to press the French government to fulfil its promise of sending another expedition to Ireland. The terms which the Irish demanded, were at once agreed to by their French allies; they were as follows; France was to send over to Ireland, from 5,000 to 10,000 troops, and 40,000 stand of arms, besides ammunition, and a loan of £500,000. The French allies were to come to Ireland, on the very same conditions as they went to America in 1776. The Irish republicans were to form their own government, and France was to be paid for the expense of the expedition, loan, &c, as in the case of America, and just as Holland was indemnified by the English, for the expenses of the liberating fleet and army which she sent to England in 1688, under the command of the Prince of Orange.

In June 1797, another envoy," Dr M'Nevin, was sent over to France, in order to hasten the liberating expedition. He was instructed to demand an extra supply of arms, in addition to the 40,000 agreed upon, on account of the unjust seizure of the arms of the Ulster Protestants, by General Lake. When Dr. M'Nevin arrived in Hamburgh, he applied to M. Reinhardt, the resident minister of the French republic, for a passport. To this, Reinhardt replied, "that he had orders not to deliver a passport without first applping for, and obtainin the permission of his government in every case. When pressed by Dr. M'Nevin, Reinhart was inflexible; but always offered to transmit to Paris, a memoir, detailing the object of his mission. This memoir was at last prepared, and as Reinhardt knew the English language, and could at any rate translate the memoir into cipher. it was deemed unnecessary to compose it in French Two days after it was delivered, Reinhardt's scruples vanished and the granted the passport, M'Nevin afterwards saw the deciphered copy of this paper in French, in Tallyrand's office, where it was kept under the particular key of the chief secretary. The original, in Fnglish, was withdrawn from Reinhardt and never afterward entrusted by M'Nevin into any hands but those upon whom suspicion could not attach; and independent of the security, offered by him character, there is this strong circumstance, that the copy of the me-Pronting a sunset; while along the uplands to the north, moir which Dr M'Nevin saw in the hands of Where Saxe was stationed, in their face the cannonade | Lord Clare, was form the French, and not the English: so that it seems probable that Tally rand, or some one else in the confidence of the French government, procured a copy of the memoir for a sum of English gold.

In August 1797, the Irish Directory received a communication from Lewins, their envoy. informing them "that the Dutch republic were fitting out an expedition at the Texel, for Ireland. Towards the end of July, the Dutch fleet was ready to sail for Ireland, and consisted and ere the vanguard disappeared under the smoky of 15 sail of the line, 10 frigates and sloops. with 27 transport ships, of 150 to 450 tons burthen. The land forces of the expedition, including cavalry, infantry, and artillery, amounted to 13,544 men. General Daendels, an honest republican, commanded the land forces; the brave Admiral DeWinter led the fleet, and that true-blooded Irishman, General Tone, was on board, to accompany the expedition, If this fleet and army of liberation had arrived in Ireland, it would have been a glorious event for Holland. The liberating expedition which Holland sent to England in 1688, only brought tyranny on the Irish. The expedition of 1797 would have wiped out old scores. brought liberty to Ireland, and reflected eternal honor to the Dutch republicans.

Speaking of the Texel armada, on the 19th of July, 1797, Tone says; "There never was and never will be such an expedition as our if it succeeds; it is not merely to determine which of two despots shall sit upon a throne, or whether an island shall belong to this or that state: it is to change the destiny of Europe-to emancipate one, perhaps three nations-to open the sea to the commerce of the world-to found a new empire-to demolish an ancient one-to subvert a tyranny of 600 years, And all this hangs to day upon the wind. I cannot express the anxiety I feel."

Owing to the contrary winds, the Dutch fleet was prevented from sailing during the favorable season. At length Admiral De Winter, on the 10th of October, put to sea, to join the French fleet at Brest, where an expedition was preparing for Ireland. The Dutch were however interrupted by a superior English fleet, and a bloody tussle took place of Camperdown, where the sick and dying, or the old woman who washes figure, exclaimed, "You have been idle since I the Dutch fought with their usual bravery, but you last," "By no means," said the were after a long engagement defeated. It is or the worms who eat it, perceive any difference only right to mention that Tone, along with the between you, whether you were rich or poor French ministers, was of opinion that some members of the Dutch government were bribed by the vile gold of the monster Pitt; and that purposes, and pursuits. The English have lyingly asserted that the works; and discover with your own eyes what Irish are unlike all other rational beings, and almighty and magnificent Being he is. Respect incapable of governing themselves. Hence and reward all talented, superior, or inspired those English say, that if the millions of the men, who discourage creature-worship and Irish lions who are still sleeping, were com- money-worship; teach real knowledge, or prinpelled by oppression to rise up unanimously on ciples and advance the reason, and elevate the the few Fnglish foxes, and "make a meal's condition of the human race. These are God's meat of them," that the said Irish would for aristocracy. Despite all cunning imposters, sooth go to all this fuss for others, not for them- bamboozlers, or word-mongers, bloody tyrants selves—that they would send off of France for fat-idlers, dependent degraded do-nothings' French schoolmasters, and that after they had roguish drones, who live out of others exertions devoured the English, they would then quietly submit to the French, whom the English call their inferiors. This is all damnation humbug What is it, but as much as to say that the Irish nation are no better than the poor ass in the fable, who was jogging along loaded with pan niers, when his master suddenly informed him 'that the enemy was coming," and cried out 'run, run." To which the ass replied, "that there was no use in his running, since, in any case, he must carry the the panniers."

If England, by her unjust usurpations, drives the Irish to imitate all other nations, and shake off an oppressive yoke, the Irish in that case will do just as other nations have done in simi. lar cases. When the Protestant Americans called in the Catholic French to assist them in their glorious tussle for liberty, the English then asserted that America would become a province of Popish France, and other nonsense but what has been the result?-When the English rebels or patriots who were afraid to rise up against their own king, James the Second invited in the Dutch to deliver them, did they. submit to the Dutch? or did England become a Dutch province, governed by a Dutch Lord-Lieutenant. When the Dutch rebels or patriots invited in the English, in order to get rid of the Spanish yoke, did the Dutch on driving out the Spaniards, become subjects of the English Did the Greeks on driving out the Turks, by the assistance of the Russians and French, bethe assistance of the Russians and French, be-nation, and an eye like an asterisk; but such come subject to either of those powers? But why quote any more cases to upset such a mis erable fallacy, which on ly amounts to thisthat no nation can ever shake off the yoke of another, without falling a prev to a third. Was there ever yet strung together such a wretched piece of balderdash as this? On this principle no individual or nation should ever care to seek for any of its stolen property or rights, for fear of having such property or rights seized again by a third party. Was there ever yet heard such nonsensical stuff as this? Following this rule, it is clear that if all nations or individuals who recover their rights and properties from one act of tyrants and robbers, must of neces sity lose rights and properties again, and yield them up to other tyrants and robbers, then there is no use in having any rights or properties at all. For if those who are strong enough to recover their just rights and properties to lose, defend them from any robbers and tyrants who may desire to possess them?

By this argument the tyrant, the robber, the murderer, the ravisher, &c, who first comes, should be received with open arms; they should be even allowed to bully, rob, murder, ravish, and to have and to hold all they wish, and be regarded in the light of lawful possessors, saviours, deliverers, and protectors, who nobly save us from imaginary third parties, who may be worse then themselves. Was there ever such confounded blasphemy as this? Suppose some unprincipled, weak-minded, creature-worshipping, oppressed, and plundered slave, in the midst of his darkness and sufferings should cry out in foolish despair, "O Great and Just Creator, why have you created millions of men for no higher and better purpose than to be tyrannized over, robbed, and murdered by their fellow men?" Might not a just-minded man in pity answer. "O little and unjust man, you blaspheme God's goodness, and wrong his justice. He has created you all naturally equal which if you were not content to be blinded,' bamboozled, and deluded by each other, you might easily perceive. Are you not all born of woman in the same manner, and do you not come into the world alike naked and helpless? Are you not nursed in the same way? Are you not all the same in the hands of the midwife. nurse, or accoucheur? After your short-lived career is finished, are you not all the same when dead? Does the nurse or physician who attends the dead body, or the physician who dissects it, tyrants or slaves. And now, oh man, learn that God has created you for just and noble

HIBERNIA BREWERY, the more you know, the more your condition will resemble God's, and the less you know, the more your condition will resemble that of the brute beasts. Know that knowledge is power -that the God-like reason and mind of man are given him for use as well as the animal body-that as the body is in the best health when cultivated, exercised, and fed, so is the mind; and that whoever would cunningly endeavor to cripple, keep back, and darken the mind or reason of man, is a blasphemer of the Creator's grandest work an impostor, a bamboozler, and a tyrant."

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

The customers of a certain cooper cause him a vast deal of vexation by their saving habits and persistence in getting all their tubs and casks repaired, buying but very little work. Thorough Organization.

The farmers' movement has a great and imortant work to accomplish in its crusade spinet weelthy monopolies and political corportant work to accomplish in its crusade against wealthy monopolies and political corruption and will need all the aid it can summon. Granges are multiplying in all directions and it will be but a short time till they are organized in every county in the State; but even when this is done, there will remain a large proportion of the farmer population outside the gate. Before the movement can become entirely successful in all its great purposes these must all, or nearly all, be brought into the organization. Those who are unable or unwilling to join the grange should be urged to join the open club, and thus be ready to act in concert with the grangers for the mutual good .-- Indiana

An Awkward Occasion.

The most awkward occasion in a young woman's career, says Bilkins, is when she returns from the wedding trip, and for the first time invites her friends to breakfast in her own house. She feels that all eyes are upon her, inquiring minds are busy sifting the sweet mysteries of her new life. In the tumult of her emotions she pours the hot water into the sugar bowl, sweetens John's coffee with salt, scalps the butter with the sleeve of her morning gown, waters the toast from the waste bowl, burns her fingers against the coffee urn, gets red in the face, and finally, unless she is a female of cast-iron resolutions, burst into a flood of tears, which all the pangs of several days' accumulated hunger are impotent to

Inspection was the work of a moment, when it was discovered that something like a cord was round the child's body, under its little night-gown. It was a snake thirty inches long coiled tight around the frame of the cherub. In fact, the wicked old serpent was so comfortable that it was with a great deal of cif-ficulty that it was persuaded to uncoil and when he did so, instead of stopping, he bolted hastily

THE HUNTINGTON HORROR.

For savage barbarity, devlish cruelty and indecency, the outrage perpetrated on the unfortunate love-sick Kelsey rivals anything ever done by Modocs or demons. To all the horrors of the tarring, feathering, and subsequent murder, there is little doubt that the diabolical perment round up with the emasculation of murder, there is little doubt that the diabolical the residence of our great men, who will find that residence both agreeable and necessary to their unhappy victim. The evidence discloses the fact that several of the Thugs brought their interest, but we shall acquire that name of which we are not barely deprived, but which wives and sweethearts to witness the shameful exhibition of a naked man covered over with the subject of the theory and that these ladies (2) and the properties of the residence of our great men, who will find that residence both agreeable and necessary to their interest, but we shall acquire that name of which we are not barely deprived, but which hightens the insolence and insults of our tyratery and that these ladies (2) and the residence of our great men, who will find that residence both agreeable and necessary to their interest, but we shall acquire that name of which we are not barely deprived, but which higher that is a subject to the residence of our great men, who will find that residence both agreeable and necessary to their interest, but we shall acquire that name of which we are not barely deprived, but which higher interest is a subject to the residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, who will find that residence of our great men, and the subject tar and feathers, and that these ladies (?) enjoyed the fun. It is a terrible commentary upon the civilization and religion of the nineteenth century—for recollect they are all Christian people, who went regularly to church, and were loud in praise of their own righteousness; and boasted that they were the pure descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers. Yet this sanctified people have not only their hands and their souls dyed red with blood, but seem to labor hard to rival each other in the blackest perjury.

with a revolver, two shots taking effect in his breast. Matt. Current then seized Burton and shot him through the head. Burton fell and was set upon by the two Currents, who beat him over the head with their pistols, fracturing his skull, beating his nose to a jelly, and cut-ting his face horribly. Marshall Milier arrested both Currents and put them in jail. The excitement was great, and lynching was talked of, as the Currents had been boisterous, and Burton was well known and was in the discharge of his duty. Burton was a single man.

A DEFAULTING CASHIER.

A defalcation in the Merchants' National Bank of Lowell (Mass.) has been discovered, The amount missing is $50,000, and it is alleged that John N. Pierce Jr., Cashier, is the guilty party. He is also Treasurer of the Central Saving Bank, and lived rather in expensive style, Lately, two-thirds of the shares of the bank were owned by Dr. J. Ayer of Boston. The discovery of the defalcation was made by an overdraft on Boston checks of the Merchants

POSTAL CONVENTION WITH GERMANY.

Some time ago the Post Office Department invited the Postal authorities of England and Germany to open negotiatons with this country Germany to open negotiations with this country for the exchange of postal facilities on the basis of two cents. England declined the propositions, but negotiations are now in progress with the German Postal Union, including Austria, and there is every probability that they will be brought to a successful issue by the 1st of December. A draft of an additional Postal Convention for this purpose is now being prepared, and will be forwarded for signature by the German authorities.

RELIEF TO THE SUFFERERS.

Nearly $2,000 in addition to the amount previously raised, have been subscribed in St. Louis for the Memphis sufferers. The commit-tee is still working in their behalf. The Odd city prison, who has within the past few weeks, Fellows and Masons have also sent some sums to be distributed by their brethern in the afshieted city. About $7,000 in money, clothing and provisions have been sent to Shreveport, and more is being contributed. Much symration. THE MURDER OF MISS HAMILL .

The mystery surrounding the death of Miss Margeret Hamill has been cleared up, and on Monday morning the detectives arrested James Merrigan, who is snpposed to have been implicated in the murder. It will be remembered that both Merrigan and his wife were originally arrested on suspicion of the murder, and the husband was discharged. Since then he has been absent from New York. He declares utter beer indicted by the Grand Jury,
